

20-1237C
(Senior Judge Firestone)

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS

TEJA RAVI,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE UNITED STATES,

Defendant.

DEFENDANT'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS

BRIAN M. BOYNTON
Acting Assistant Attorney General

ROBERT E. KIRSCHMAN, JR.
Director

ERIC P. BRUSKIN
Assistant Director

MEEN GEU OH
Senior Trial Counsel
Commercial Litigation Branch
Civil Division
Department of Justice
P.O. Box 480
Ben Franklin Station
Washington, D.C. 20044
Telephone: (202) 307-0184
Email: Meen-Geu.Oh@usdoj.gov

February 24, 2021

Attorneys for Defendant

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	1
ARGUMENT	2
I. Both Mr. Ravi's Amended Pleading And His Response To Our Motion Confirm That His Lawsuit Is Based Solely In Tort, Not Contract.....	2
II. There Was No Tucker Act Contract To Provide Mr. Ravi With Educational Services	5
III. The Sovereign Capacity Doctrine Bars Mr. Ravi's Lawsuit	10
CONCLUSION.....	12

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases	Page(s)
Aetna Cas. and Sur. Co. v. United States , 228 Ct. Cl. 146 (1981)	3
Aluminum Shapes, LLC v. United States , 139 Fed. Cl. 709 (2018)	10, 11
Awad v. United States , 61 Fed. Cl. 281 (2004)	10, 11
Baha v. United States , 144 Fed. Cl. 500 (2019)	9
Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly , 550 U.S. 544 (2007)	6, 7
City of Cincinnati v. United States , 153 F.3d 1375 (Fed. Cir. 1998)	5
Collins v. United States , 532 F.2d 1344 (Ct. Cl. 1976)	9
Dakota Tribal Indus. v. United States , 34 Fed. Cl. 295 (1995)	2, 3
Degenaars Co. v. United States , 2 Cl. Ct. 482 (1983)	4, 5
Hercules Inc. v. United States , 516 U.S. 417, 116 S.Ct. 981, 134 L.Ed.2d 47 (1996)	9
Jumah v. United States , 90 Fed. Cl. 603 (2009)	6
Kellogg Brown & Root Servs., Inc. v. United States , 99 Fed. Cl. 488 (2011) aff'd , 728 F.3d 1348 (Fed. Cir. 2013) opinion corrected on denial of reh'g , 563 F. App'x 769 (Fed. Cir. 2014)	8
L'Enfant Plaza Properties, Inc. v. United States , 227 Ct. Cl. 1 (1981)	3
Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co. v. United States , 654 F.3d 1305 (Fed. Cir. 2011)	9

Morris v. United States, 33 Fed. Cl. 733 (1995)	3
Outlaw v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 656 (2014)	4
Perez v. United States, 156 F.3d 1366 (Fed. Cir. 1998).....	8
Phang v. United States, 87 Fed. Cl. 321 (2009)	4
Piotrowski v. United States, No. 13-760C, 2014 WL 7476033 (Fed. Cl. Dec. 30, 2014) aff'd , 722 F. App'x 982 (Fed. Cir. 2018)	4
Reforestacion de Sarapiqui v. United States, 26 Cl. Ct. 177 (1992)	3
Schweitzer v. United States, 82 Fed. Cl. 592 (2008)	6
Seuss v. United States, 535 F.3d 1348 (Fed. Cir. 2008).....	8
Silva v. United States, 51 Fed. Cl. 374 aff'd , 51 F. App'x 12 (Fed. Cir. 2002)	6, 10, 11
Sommers Oil Co. v. United States, 41 F.3d 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2001).....	11
Trudeau v. United States, 68 Fed. Cl. 121 (2005) aff'd , 186 F. App'x 998 (Fed. Cir. 2006)	10, 11
United States v. Neustadt, 366 U.S. 696 (1961).....	5
Utley v. Donaldson, 94 U.S. 29, 24 L. Ed. 54 (1876).....	8
Villars v. United States, 126 Fed. Cl. 626 (2016)	6, 11
Zhu v. Dep't of Homeland Sec., No. 2:18-489, 2019 WL 4261167 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 9, 2019)	7, 8

Statutes

28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1).....	5
-----------------------------	---

Other Authorities

Restatement (Second) of Torts § 525 (1977).....	4
--	---

INTRODUCTION

Defendant, the United States, respectfully submits this reply in support of its motion to dismiss the complaint of the plaintiff, Teja Ravi.

As the Court is aware, this case centers on a Government-created entity called the University of Farmington (University). See generally Am. Compl., ECF No. 8 (hereafter, Am. Compl.). The University was not an actual University. It was an undercover law enforcement operation designed to ferret out illegal conduct and “expose student visa fraud.” Id. ¶¶ 1, 3, 8-21, and 27. Mr. Ravi, an Indian citizen, claims he was wrongly singled out in these operations.¹ Id. ¶ 1. He claims that he, unlike others, remitted money to the University in the pursuit of higher learning, id. ¶ 9-22, rather than to fraudulently overstay his student visa. Because the University was simply a front, and the Government never actually intended to (and therefore, did not) provide him educational services, id. ¶ 9, Mr. Ravi insists he is within his rights to sue the Government for breach of contract, id. ¶¶ 39-51.

As we stated in our motion, there are three independent reasons why Mr. Ravi’s complaint must be dismissed. First, although he labels his case as one arising under a contract, Mr. Ravi plainly pleads a fraud case. In totality, Mr. Ravi claims that he was induced by fraud to register with the University and now (having had his visa status revoked) demands his money back. That claim of “fraudulent inducement” is a tort, and not remediable in this Court. Def. Mot. to Dismiss, ECF No. 6 (hereafter, Mot.) at 5-6. Second, Mr. Ravi does not plausibly plead all the necessary elements of his Tucker Act contract claim. His pleading acknowledges that there was no mutuality of intent to contract on the part of the Government. It further fails to provide any plausible explanation as to how undercover law enforcement officers (effectuating a law enforcement operation) could have genuinely obligated the Government to provide Mr. Ravi with educational services. Mot. at 4-5. Third, even assuming Mr. Ravi could articulate a valid contract case, his suit would still be barred by the sovereign capacity doctrine. The activities that Mr. Ravi identifies as “fraud” were unquestionably tied to the Government’s law enforcement work, which is not susceptible to contract-based claims under the Tucker Act. Mot. at 6-7.

¹ As we said in our moving papers, for the purposes of this motion, we must assume that all of the allegations in Mr. Ravi’s complaint are true. Should this motion be denied, we reserve the right to contest Mr. Ravi’s allegations in his amended complaint.

Mr. Ravi fails to provide any persuasive reason why his case should not be dismissed. He opposes our motion, but his opposition misunderstands (or misstates) the law, and ignores clearly pleaded facts that undermine his case. And although Mr. Ravi has unilaterally filed an amended pleading in an attempt to cure some of the more obvious deficiencies in his complaint, Am. Compl., the spot-based changes he makes to his pleading do nothing to meaningfully address the problems we have identified.² The same fundamental problems persist. Accordingly, Mr. Ravi’s complaint must be dismissed.

ARGUMENT

I. Both Mr. Ravi’s Amended Pleading And His Response To Our Motion Confirm That His Lawsuit Is Based Solely In Tort, Not Contract

In our motion, we explained that Mr. Ravi’s pleading must be dismissed because the “gravamen” of his suit resounds in tort. Mot. at 5-6. Mr. Ravi seems to acknowledge that his lawsuit arises out of a tort, but insists that his claim “is not barred simply because it can be stated” as one. Pl. Resp. to Mot., ECF No. 9 (hereafter, Pl. Resp.) at 3 (citing Dakota Tribal

² Although Mr. Ravi does not explain how his amended pleading differs from its original iteration, we include for the Court’s convenience an attachment to this filing identifying the five places where Mr. Ravi has added language to his pleading. See Ex. 1, ¶¶ 8, 27, 36, 43, and 44. Mr. Ravi also removed the words “from abroad” from paragraph 1 of his pleading.

Indus. v. United States, 34 Fed. Cl. 295 (1995)). According to Mr. Ravi, “even if [his allegations] also [give rise to] a tort,” the Court may nonetheless take jurisdiction of his case under the Tucker Act because he points to a “contract” that later sprang out of what he describes as the Government’s fraudulent conduct. Id. (citing Morris v. United States, 33 Fed. Cl. 733 (1995)).

Mr. Ravi misunderstands the law. Although a tortious misrepresentation claim may be remediable under the Tucker Act if that claim can be traced back to an already-existing contract, for instance, where there is a “tortious breach of contract,” see, e.g., Dakota, 34 Fed. Cl. at 297, Morris, 33 Fed. Cl. at 742, the Tucker Act does not cover “fraudulent inducement” cases, where the facts giving rise to the action predate the purported agreement. See Aetna Cas. and Sur. Co. v. United States, 228 Ct. Cl. 146, 164 (1981) (explaining that “fraudulent inducement and misrepresentation” claims are “expressly beyond Tucker Act jurisdiction” (internal citations omitted)); Reforestacion de Sarapiqui v. United States, 26 Cl. Ct. 177, 191 (1992), aff’d, 985 F.2d 583 (Fed. Cir. 1992) (dismissing claim of “fraud in the inducement,” because it “presupposes that certain tortious acts were committed by [the Government] prior to the execution of the written contracts, and not after the execution and in the performance thereof” (emphasis in original)); Dakota, 34 Fed. Cl. at 298 (explaining that “contractual relationship” must “pre-exist[]” the actions for which plaintiff sues (citing L’Enfant Plaza Properties, Inc. v. United States, 227 Ct. Cl. 1, 11 (1981)).

Here, Mr. Ravi is not alleging that the Government committed fraud emanating out of an already-existing Tucker Act contract. Instead, he is alleging that the purported contract itself would not exist but for the Government’s purported misrepresentations, meaning he is suing for the underlying fraudulent act itself. This Court has repeatedly held that it lacks jurisdiction over those types of claims. E.g., See Phang v. United States, 87 Fed. Cl. 321, 325–26 (2009), aff'd sub nom. Phu Mang Phang v. United States, 388 F. App'x 961 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (dismissing claim that the Government knowingly made misrepresentations to induce the complainant to sign a plea agreement, which is a tort); Outlaw v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 656, 662 (2014) (same); Piotrowski v. United States, No. 13-760C, 2014 WL 7476033, at *13 (Fed. Cl. Dec. 30, 2014), aff'd, 722 F. App'x 982 (Fed. Cir. 2018) (dismissing claim that “the Army ‘intentionally misled’ [the plaintiff] into entering an enlistment agreement,” on the ground that the claim is a “tort” (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 525 (1977))).

Mr. Ravi cannot ignore his pleaded facts. He explains repeatedly that his case is in fact a “fraudulent inducement” case. Mr. Ravi starts his pleading by claiming that the Government made “false” and “misleading” promises designed to “manipulate” and “deceive the public.” Id. ¶ 10. He adds that the Government’s measures were nothing more than “an effort to induce students,” id. ¶ 15, into believing “that the University was a legitimate and authorized school,” id. ¶ 27. He insists that these “actions and assurances”—capped by the use of “phony credentials and misleading and false statements,” id. ¶ 10—were “fabricated,” id. ¶ 19, and that is what caused him to register for the University, id. ¶ 15. He repeatedly refers to the University as a “fake,” a “façade,” a “sham,” and “fraudulent,” id. ¶¶ 4, 8, 10, 27, and concludes by urging the Court to hold the Government “liable for intentional and/or negligent misrepresentations,” and “false promises,” id. ¶ 36(d)(viii) & (x). Indeed, making no attempt to hide the true grounds for his case, Mr. Ravi insists that a triable issue in this case is “[w]hether the University is liable for fraud.” Id. ¶ 36(d)(ix). Both in substance and in form, Mr. Ravi “pervades [his] pleading with insinuations of scienter, which, if properly presented would mean that the petition would clearly have to be dismissed as a demand[] founded in tort.” Degenaars Co. v. United States, 2 Cl. Ct.

482, 490 (1983) (citations omitted); see United States v. Neustadt, 366 U.S. 696, 703 (1961) (instructing courts to “look beyond the literal meaning of the language to ascertain the real cause of complaint”).

As we said in our motion, Mr. Ravi’s complaint bears all the hallmarks of a garden-variety fraud claim, which is a tort. The Tucker Act specifically excludes tort cases from this Court’s jurisdiction. 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1) (“The United States Court of Federal Claims shall have jurisdiction to render judgment upon any claim against the United States ... for liquidated or unliquidated damages in cases not sounding in tort.”). Because Mr. Ravi’s amended pleading resounds in fraud, it must be dismissed.

II. There Was No Tucker Act Contract To Provide Mr. Ravi With Educational Services

Mr. Ravi’s complaint fails for another reason. In our motion, we explained that Mr. Ravi was unable to plausibly plead all the basic elements of his purported contract case. For instance, to establish that the Government agreed to contractually obligate itself under the type of contract he alleges, we explained that “Mr. Ravi must identify someone (or some entity) capable of binding the United States to a contract to provide him with the services he claims were withheld.” Mot. at 4 (citing, in part, City of Cincinnati v. United States, 153 F.3d 1375, 1377 (Fed. Cir. 1998)). Mr. Ravi made no attempt to plead this last necessary element, and we argued that omission, by itself, was fatal to his case.³

Recognizing that his pleading was in fact deficient, Mr. Ravi unilaterally amended his pleading after we filed our motion. He now adds language to his pleading claiming that “law enforcement personnel” “had actual authority to bind the government in contract” to provide him with educational services, Am. Compl. ¶ 42, or that someone in the Government with that authority must have later “ratified th[os]e contracts....” Am. Compl. ¶ 43.

³ Mr. Ravi claims “more recent case law” shows that Government authority is no longer a necessary element to establish a Tucker Act contract. Pl. Resp. at 2. That is not correct, and none of the cases he cites support that proposition. See id.

Adding conclusory labels to allegations does not cure the issues we identified. See Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (requiring a plaintiff to plead more than labels and conclusion); Schweitzer v. United States, 82 Fed. Cl. 592, 594–95 (2008) (“a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do” (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555)). Especially in cases that challenge undercover law enforcement functions, a plaintiff should “direct the Court’s attention to anything that would vest in [some individual] the specific authority to bind the United States in contract.” Silva v. United States, 51 Fed. Cl. 374, 378, aff’d, 51 F. App’x 12 (Fed. Cir. 2002). For instance, because Mr. Ravi is claiming that law enforcement agents had “actual authority to bind the government in contract,” Am. Comp. ¶ 43; see also Pl. Resp. at 2, he must identify where in “the Constitution, a statute, or a regulation” a percipient Government official is granted that authority “in unambiguous terms,” Villars v. United States, 126 Fed. Cl. 626, 635 (2016) (quoting Jumah v. United States, 90 Fed. Cl. 603, 612 (2009)). Mr. Ravi cites none of these things in support of his pleading.

Instead, Mr. Ravi suggests that one must plausibly conclude that law enforcement officials had implied authority to execute educational services contracts with “students” because that authority was necessary for them to carry out their duties in these operations. See Pl. Resp. at 2; Am. Compl. ¶¶ 27, 42-43. But that explanation makes no sense. The University was an undercover operation to “expose student visa fraud.” Am. Compl. ¶ 1. It was not an actual University that provided educational services. Id. ¶¶ 8-21. It is implausible, therefore, to assume that law enforcement needed authority to bind the Government to contracts for the provision of educational services that Mr. Ravi concedes the Government never planned to provide.⁴

Whatever representations law enforcement personnel made, they made in the furtherance of legitimate law enforcement goals. Accordingly, the only authority these officers needed was the authority to make those representations, which is something vastly different than the authority required to actually bind the United States to a legitimate contract for educational services.

As we indicated in our motion, a Federal district court dismissed a largely identical breach of contract claim involving a Government-created university on these same legal grounds. Zhu v. Dep't of Homeland Sec., No. 2:18-489, 2019 WL 4261167, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 9, 2019) (dismissing complaint because plaintiff did not “allege facts that plausibly show a government’s representative had actual authority to bind the government in contract”). Mr. Ravi attempts to distinguish Zhu by claiming that “the plaintiff in that case” “did not allege that a government’s representative had actual authority to bind the government in contract.” Pl. Resp. at 3. In fact, that is precisely what the plaintiff in that case pleaded, when he alleged that the University “was properly authorized to issue him . . . a valid Form I-20,” which is a document normally provided to students by educational institutions. Zhu, 2019 WL 4261167, at *4. That is more than what Mr. Ravi alleges here. See Am. Compl. ¶¶ 42-43 (conclusory allegations). Yet even in Zhu, the court found that the plaintiff had not “plausibly show[n]” how law enforcement personnel, working undercover as administrators, could possibly have been vested with authority to bind the Government to those kinds of services. See Zhu, 2019 WL 4261167, at *4. Zhu is substantively indistinguishable from the present case.

⁴ Mr. Ravi argues that “[d]iscovery” will allow him “to further identify the United States personnel involved” and the “authority” with which law enforcement personnel acted—directly or institutionally—to “bind the students in contract.” Pl. Resp. at 2, 5-6. But again, the University was nothing more than a front for an undercover law enforcement operation, and the Government never intended to provide educational services. The only authority officers were required to have was the authority to make representations, which is not the same thing as the authority required to legitimately bind the United States to an educational services contract. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556 (explaining that a complaint must allege plausible “fact[s]” that “raise a reasonable inference that discovery will reveal evidence” to support a claim).

Aside from the issue of contractual authority, Mr. Ravi's contract case fails in another way. In order for Mr. Ravi to plead his breach of contract case, he must allege facts demonstrating mutuality of intent to contract. See Seuss v. United States, 535 F.3d 1348, 1359 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (explaining that mutuality of intent to contract is a necessary contractual element). Yet Mr. Ravi's pleading acknowledges repeatedly that the Government never intended to provide him with any educational services. See Am. Compl. ¶¶ 1, 3, 8-21. Absent mutuality of intent, the agreement Mr. Ravi purports to identify as giving rise to his case never existed. Utley v. Donaldson, 94 U.S. 29, 47, 24 L. Ed. 54 (1876) ("Where there is a misunderstanding as to anything material, the requisite mutuality of assent as to such thing is wanting; consequently the supposed contract does not exist, and neither party is bound."); Kellogg Brown & Root Servs., Inc. v. United States, 99 Fed. Cl. 488, 515 (2011), aff'd, 728 F.3d 1348 (Fed. Cir. 2013), opinion corrected on denial of reh'g, 563 F. App'x 769 (Fed. Cir. 2014) (explaining circumstances where a contract can be deemed void ab initio where a "false statement" "induce[s] the contract so that no mutual assent can be said to have existed").⁵

This highlights precisely why Mr. Ravi's case is not actually a contract case. In response to our motion, Mr. Ravi seems to argue that even absent mutuality of intent, he has pled a viable contract claim that the Court has jurisdiction to review because the Government unjustly retained some benefit. See Am. Compl. ¶¶ 8, 27, 36(d)(vii) & (xiii), 44, 50. He makes that claim repeatedly, and in fact, amended his pleading to emphasize the point. Id. ¶¶ 8, 27, 44. But that merely describes an implied-in-law contract claim—such as a “quasi-contract” claim for unjust enrichment or quantum meruit—which is a fictional contract claim that is not redressable under the Tucker Act. Baha v. United States, 144 Fed. Cl. 500, 507 (2019) (dismissing “quasi-contract” claim where “Army occupied the subject property without paying rent” because the Tucker Act does not confer the Court with jurisdiction over “implied in law contract” claims) (citing Hercules Inc. v. United States, 516 U.S. 417, 423, 116 S.Ct. 981, 134 L.Ed.2d 47 (1996) & Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co. v. United States, 654 F.3d 1305, 1316 (Fed. Cir. 2011)); Collins v. United States, 532 F.2d 1344, 1351 (Ct. Cl. 1976) (citing 1 Corbin on Contracts, § 19 (2d ed. 1963)) (explaining that, unlike genuine contract claims, where “the equivalent of mutual assent is present,” “a contract implied in law is one in which a duty to make restitution is implied, regardless of the lack of mutual assent, for reasons of justice and equity.” (emphasis added)). Mr. Ravi provides no precedential support for the notion that this Court may entertain quasi-contract claims lacking mutuality of intent as long as there is an allegation the Government retained some benefit of the supposed bargain, nor are we aware of any.

⁵ As it relates to the question of mutual assent, Mr. Ravi states that "[f]or contracts, courts do not look to the internal desires of parties; rather courts look to express intent of the parties." Pl. Resp. at 6. Mr. Ravi seems to misunderstand our point. Certainly courts should look to the text of a contract to determine whether a contract exists and what promises were exchanged. The problem with Mr. Ravi's case, however, is that he pleads himself out of an allegation of mutual assent. See Perez v. United States, 156 F.3d 1366, 1370 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (explaining that courts must assume that all well-pled factual allegations are true for purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim). His own pleaded facts defeat the contractual basis for his case.

At its heart, Mr. Ravi’s complaint pleads (and seeks to recover) under a tort claim or some claim based on equity. His case is not founded upon a legitimate contract, nor does he seek to recover under one. That is evident based upon any fair reading of his pleading. Accordingly, Mr. Ravi’s breach of contract claim must be dismissed.

III. The Sovereign Capacity Doctrine Bars Mr. Ravi's Lawsuit

As we explained in our motion, this Court—under the sovereign capacity doctrine—has repeatedly barred review of purported contract actions that arise out of “criminal” or “civil enforcement actions . . . that could only be undertaken by the sovereign.” Aluminum Shapes, LLC v. United States, 139 Fed. Cl. 709, 714 (2018); see Trudeau v. United States, 68 Fed. Cl. 121, 127 (2005), aff'd, 186 F. App'x 998 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (citations omitted). Where the Government is acting in a uniquely sovereign function that lacks “a private analogue,” this Court has held that the Government has not clearly and unequivocally waived its sovereign immunity. Awad v. United States, 61 Fed. Cl. 281, 284 (2004)

In response, Mr. Ravi argues that the doctrine should not apply here because the educational services “contracts at issue [here] were only tangentially related to carrying out a law enforcement purpose.” Pl. Resp. at 4. He argues that the law enforcement personnel were effectively “stepp[ing] off the throne” when they “engaged[d] in the sale of educational services.” Pl. Resp. at 3. It is unclear how Mr. Ravi can make that claim. The entire purpose of the University—indeed, the sole purpose of the Government’s purported representations—was to effectuate an undercover law enforcement operation and “expose student visa fraud.” Am. Compl. ¶ 1. There is no dispute that these representations were fundamental to the undercover law enforcement operation. What might appear “on [its] face to be a commercial agreement between two private parties,” was actually made “for the purpose of furthering undercover law enforcement operations . . . activities that, without question, lie at the heart of sovereign action.” Silva, 51 Fed. Cl. at 377 (citation omitted). The sovereign capacity doctrine bars contract-based lawsuits on these grounds.

Mr. Ravi relies on Sommers Oil Co. v. United States to argue that the sovereign capacity doctrine applies only to “active criminal cases” or in instances where the Government is being asked to “pay[] monetary damages for seized contraband.” Pl. Resp. at 4 (citing 241 F.3d 1375 (Fed. Cir. 2001)). But that is plainly incorrect. Nearly all the cases we cite apply the doctrine in actions that neither involve crimes nor the seizure of contraband. E.g., Aluminum Shapes, 139 Fed. Cl. at 714 (applying doctrine to bar suit under a civil settlement agreement); Trudeau, 68 Fed. Cl. at 127 (2005) (same); Awad, 61 Fed. Cl. at 284 (applying doctrine to bar suit regarding “granting of citizenship and passports” which are “solely governmental functions”). As we said in our motion, the sovereign capacity doctrine bars contract-based lawsuits under the Tucker Act in instances where the Government is clearly acting in a non-private, law enforcement capacity. This case involves one such instance.⁶

⁶ Informant cases—where law enforcement agents allegedly procure informant services in the furtherance of law enforcement objectives—are different. See Silva, 51 Fed. Cl. at 377 (discussing the interplay between the sovereign capacity doctrine and its nexus to informant cases). In those cases, the Government can (and sometimes does) “step off the throne” to secure informant services through agreements that can be ratified (either directly or institutionally) by the Government. E.g., Villars, 126 Fed. Cl. at 635-37. The purported agreement here—where the Government does not procure anything resembling goods or services and which lies at the heart of the Government’s undercover operation—does not resemble anything close to an informant services contract.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, we respectfully request that the Court dismiss Mr. Ravi's amended complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction or, alternatively, for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

BRIAN M. BOYNTON
Acting Assistant Attorney General

ROBERT E. KIRSCHMAN, JR.
Director

/s/ Eric P. Bruskin
ERIC P. BRUSKIN
Assistant Director

/s/ Meen Geu Oh
Senior Trial Counsel
Commercial Litigation Branch
Civil Division
P.O. Box 480
Ben Franklin Station
Washington, D.C. 20044
Tel: (202) 307-0184

February 24, 2021

Attorneys for Defendant

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify under penalty of perjury that on this 24th day of February 2021, a copy of the foregoing “DEFENDANT’S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO DISMISS PLAINTIFF’S AMENDED COMPLAINT” was filed electronically. I understand that notice of this filing will be sent to all parties by operation of the Court’s electronic filing system. Parties may access this filing through the Court’s system.

s/ Meen Geu Oh

EXHIBIT 1

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS

Teja Ravi, Individually and on Behalf of	:
All Others Similarly Situated	:
 	:
Plaintiff,	:	No. 20-1237C
	:	(Senior Judge Firestone)
 	:
v.	:
 	:
The United States of America	:
	:
 	:
Defendant.	:

AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

Plaintiff Teja Ravi (“Plaintiff”), by and through his attorneys, brings this action on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated against the United States. Plaintiff hereby alleges, on information and belief, except as to those allegations which pertain to the named Plaintiff, which allegations are based on personal knowledge, as follows:

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. The University of Farmington marketed itself as a university that “provide[s] students from throughout the world a unique educational experience” and claimed to be credited by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs and the Accrediting Commission of Career Schools and Colleges. Farmington also claimed it was authorized by the Student and Exchange Visitor Program that allows the admittance of foreign students. However, Farmington was nothing more than a façade. It is now well known that the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement’s Homeland Security Investigations (“HSI”) created Farmington in an attempt to expose student visa fraud in the United States. Yet there was no way for prospective students to distinguish Farmington from a real university. Farmington created what appeared to be a legitimate web presence through its website and Twitter. The website went so far as to have bad weather alerts for students. Ultimately, there was no reason for a student applying to know or have a suspicion that Farmington was a fake university.

2. Plaintiff and class members applied and enrolled at Farmington with the understanding that it was an accredited university offering legitimate degrees in such programs as a Masters in Information Technology and a Masters in Computer Science. Farmington required that Plaintiff and class members pay tuition upon acceptance. All class members were informed that there would be regular classes each month, and all class members enrolled in the online program as most of the students lived outside of the state of Michigan and/or were unable to attend on campus courses due to their employment. None of the students received services in exchange for their tuition.

3. In January 2019, Defendant revealed that the University was a sham and reneged on their guarantees that Plaintiff and Class members had properly adhered to immigration regulations and were therefore lawfully residing and working in the United States. Defendant instead had the audacity to revoke Plaintiff and Class members visa status, accusing the enrollees of visa fraud, even though Plaintiff and Class members were unwitting victims of Defendant’s scheme, and had reasonably believed in Defendant’s actions and assurances, that the University was a legitimate and authorized school.

4. The University turned out to be a fraudulent, and deprived class members of millions of dollars, without providing the services that it offered and promised. Plaintiff, therefore, brings this action on behalf of himself and all other similarly situated persons who enrolled at the University of Farmington asserting Breach of Contract and Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. Plaintiff seeks damages and equitable relief on behalf of the Class, which relief includes, but is not limited to, the following: refunding Plaintiff and class member full amount paid to the University of Farmington; costs and expenses, including attorneys’ fees and expert fees; and any additional relief that this Court determines to be necessary to provide complete relief to Plaintiff and the class.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

5. The United States Court of Federal Claims has jurisdiction and venue over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1).

PARTIES

6. Plaintiff Teja Ravi is a citizen of India who resided in Houston, Texas at the time he enrolled at Farmington. During the class period, in March 2018, Plaintiff was accepted and enrolled in the University. Plaintiff was told by University officials that he would have regular classes monthly. Plaintiff paid $12,500 in tuition to the University and believed the University's website and marketing material regarding its accreditation.

7. Defendant is the United States, as acting through its agencies, including the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, which is based in Washington, D.C. has field offices throughout the United States and is a branch of DHS.

NATURE OF THE CASE AND BACKGROUND FOR THE CONTRACT

8. The University of Farmington was a fake university setup by ICE's Homeland Security Investigations and overseen by DHS and was setup to expose student visa fraud. Defendant authorized HSI and/ or DHS agents to setup and run the University of Farmington scheme, including to enroll students, to accept tuition payments, and to use these contracts with students as a basis to revoke their visa status.

9. Defendant offered classes and degree programs on the University of Farmington website and through letters of admission. Class members accepted defendant's offers of admission to enroll in the degree programs. Class members paid tuition money to the University. However, the Defendant did not provide class or degree programs as offered.

10. In an effort to maintain a legitimate façade, Defendant used a complex scheme of phony credentials and misleading and false statements to enrolled and prospective students. This scheme included:

- Establishing a physical location:
 - Defendant leased a physical office in Farmington Hills, Michigan. Nevertheless, all administrative interfacing between the University officials and students/prospective students occurred digitally or telephonically as many of the enrolled students and prospective students relied on the online feature of the University.
- Enlisting recruiters to lure students:
 - Defendant enlisted the assistance of nearly a dozen recruiters to funnel Plaintiff and Class members to enroll in the University of Farmington, rather than other, legitimate, graduate programs. These recruiters, primarily foreign students, were in similar social circles as Plaintiff and Class members and approached Plaintiff and class members without solicitation. Defendant offered recruiters incentives for leading potential students to the University, in the form of cash or University credits. Recruiters helped funnel nearly six hundred (600) students to enroll at Farmington.

- Fabricating credentials:
 - Defendant went to great lengths to manipulate foreign prospective students by creating the impression that the University was legitimate. This included:
 - Undercover agents of the Department of Homeland Security registering the University of Farmington with the state of Michigan as a legitimate university (through Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs).
 - A national accreditation agency (Accrediting Commission of Career Schools and Colleges), at the request of DHS, listed the University of Farmington as being accredited in order to help deceive prospective students.
 - Defendant placing the University on an ICE website, listing the University as an institution approved for the Student and Exchange Visitor Program (“SEVIS”).

13. The University further enticed student enrollment through what appeared to be a legitimate web presence.

14. From its web presence, it was virtually impossible for a prospective student to differentiate the University from a legitimate one. Prospective students researching schools were doing so from the internet as the majority neither lived in or near Michigan, where the University was located.

15. The University had a professional website, a red and blue coat of arms as its emblem, a Latin slogan meaning “knowledge and work” and a physical location at a commercial building in Farmington Hills, Michigan. Further, the website offered specific details related to its courses and provided tuition pricing.

University of Farmington

Factoids

Home About Us Admissions Programs Factoids Contact

31 Jan 2019 – 31 Dec 2019

DEC JAN DEC
31 2019 2020

One page on its website read:

Located in the heart of the automotive and advanced manufacturing center of Southeast Michigan, the University of Farmington provides students from throughout the world a unique educational experience. Our dynamic business administration and STEM curriculum allows students to rapidly apply their knowledge; preparing them to succeed in an ever-globalizing economy.

Another page describes an educational and collaborative community enrollees could be a part of at UF:

We are very excited about welcoming you to the UF community and helping you achieve your academic goals. You'll find UF to be a vibrant and growing institution where students, faculty and staff enjoy a challenging and collaborative environment. UF has a rolling admission process and operates on a quarterly academic calendar. Students are encouraged to apply early to ensure a smooth transition to UF.

The website also listed and described the enticing, but illusory programs, offered by Farmington. Regarding its graduate MBA program, the site stated:

The two-year schedule offers a convenient way for you to add a master's degree to your résumé while you work. . . . Students hone their skills in project and program management, quality improvement initiatives, and creativity and problem solving. This interactive and collaborative cohort program helps students build strong ties with their professional faculty and gain perspectives from other disciplines and leaders in industry.

The University's website went even further in an effort to induce students with statements such as the school "was accredited by the Accrediting Commission of Career Schools and Colleges (www.accsc.org) and licensed by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs as a private postsecondary college. UF is authorized by the Student and Exchange Visitor Program to admit foreign students."

16. Ultimately, it was near impossible for a prospective student to discern the legitimacy of the University through its recruitment efforts and web presence.

17. The University also engaged in individual communication via postal and electronic mail with the prospective students. Upon acceptance of an offer letter from the University, a student was enrolled and was advised that there would be regular classes monthly. The University also mailed students an I-20, Certificate of Eligibility for Nonimmigrant Student Status to students, leaving them no reason to question the University's legitimacy. (see Exhibit 1)

18. Emails from University officials continued the impression of legitimacy. In an email to prospective students an official wrote:

Thank you for your recent interest in The University of Farmington, a nationally accredited business and STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) institution. Here at the University of Farmington we have created an innovative learning environment that combines traditional instruction with fulltime professional experiences. We offer flexible class schedules and a focus on students who do not want to interrupt their careers. (see Exhibit 2)

19. Other communication from officials reiterated the University's fabricated claims regarding its programs available to students with statements such as:

In many instances, your prior Masters Degree's (MA) credits, combined with CPT, can be applied to a second MA in lieu of a traditional course load." And he continued to highlight the scheme's accreditation: "We are accredited by the Accrediting Commission of Career Schools and Colleges (www.accsc.org) and licensed by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs as a private postsecondary college.

20. To further strengthen its claim of legitimacy, emails from the University contained a footer with the following statement: "A nationally accredited institution authorized to enroll international students by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security."

21. Upon enrollment at the University, students would pay tuition to the University and were advised that a class schedule would be forthcoming. The class schedule never arrived. When students questioned the University regarding the lack of a class schedule and assignments, they were met with either silence or assurances from Farmington officials about the legitimacy of the school.

For example:

22. Teja Ravi paid $12,500 in tuition to Farmington after he enrolled in March 2018, after which he was enrolled and informed that he would have a regular class schedule and have regular class. But he was never enrolled in classes or given assignments. As soon as the semester commenced, and he still was not enrolled in classes, he contacted officials at the University to ask about classes and assignment. A university official advised him not worry about it as that was not an issue. It wasn't until about a year after enrollment, Teja was advised by a friend that the University was a fake. Teja contacted the University to clarify this rumor and was told by a University official that the rumor was not true. Ravi never received any educational services from the University.

23. Rajasekhar Reddy enrolled in Farmington in October 2017 after paying tuition in the amount of $10,000. Rajasekhar applied after researching the school online and reviewing Farmington's website. In January 2019, Rajasekhar learned the University was a fake. He tried several times to contact the University and received no response.

24. Naveen Kumar enrolled at University of Farmington around May 2018. Naveen visited Farmington, MI during the enrollment process, but the University was closed the day he visited. After researching the University online, Naveen ultimately submitted an application and accepted its offer to attend. When Naveen became suspicious of the University he requested a transfer of his SEVIS to another school. Farmington would only agree to the transfer in exchange for a payment of $1500, which Naveen paid.

25. Pavan Sama, a Farmington student during the time period of Defendant's unlawful acts had a similar experience to other students. He corresponded with a University official named Carey Ferrante whose email address was carey.ferrante@universityoffarmington.edu. Sama paid $15,000 in tuition to Farmington.

26. Each of these students had common facts associated with their matters: they each relied on the website; they each relied on individual communications with University staff; they each received an accepted offer of admission; they each enrolled and paid thousands of dollars of tuition; none of them received class information after enrolling; none of them were enrolled in classes; those who inquired after enrolling received assurances; none of them received any sort of service for the thousands of dollars that they spent in tuition money.

27. In January 2019, Defendant revealed that the University was a sham and reneged on their guarantees that Plaintiff and Class members had properly adhered to immigration regulations and were therefore lawfully residing and working in the United States. Defendant instead had the audacity to revoke Plaintiff and Class members visa status, accusing the enrollees of visa fraud, even though Plaintiff and Class members were unwitting victims of Defendant's scheme, and had reasonably believed in Defendant's actions and assurances, that the University was a legitimate and authorized school. Defendant had knowledge of the contractual relationship between Defendant and Plaintiff and class members at this time, as the high ranking HSI and/ or DHS officials who authorized the University of Farmington scheme and the revocation of Farmington students' visa status knew that University of Farmington was Defendant's scheme, and knew of Plaintiff and Class members' status as Farmington students, as this was the basis for revoking their visa status and accusing them of visa fraud. Defendant kept all tuition money it collected from Plaintiff and Class members.

PLAINTIFF'S FACTS

28. Plaintiff Teja Ravi learned of the University from a friend who advised him that he could attend all classes online, which would allow him to maintain the Curricular Practical Training that allowed him to attend school and continue with employment in the United States. Plaintiff was also enticed by the University's three-month semester schedule as he traveled frequently for his contracted work, which was on a six-month basis.

29. At the time Plaintiff applied to the University in early 2018, he was enrolled in engineering curriculum at Northwestern Polytechnic University in California, and had been granted a 5-year student visa through that program from July 2015 to July 2020. Plaintiff was interested in the University of Farmington as it offered graduate programs in IT, which he hoped would make him a more attractive candidate to prospective employers. Plaintiff applied to the University in early 2018 by filling out an admission form and enrolled in the Masters in Information Technology program.

30. Upon enrollment to the University, Plaintiff paid $12,500 in tuition. He was advised by the University that he would be scheduled for regular classes every month. After commencement of the first semester, Plaintiff did not receive any classes to attend or assignments, as he had been promised by the University. Plaintiff contacted University administration to find out why and was told by University officials that the lack of classes and assignments would not be an issue. Plaintiff also re-checked the University's accreditation on its website, which indicated that his Curricular Practical Training ("CPT") was valid.

31. A year after enrolling, Plaintiff learned that the University might be fraudulent. Plaintiff contacted University administration three times. On his third attempt, Plaintiff spoke with University administrator Carrie Fernand, who advised Plaintiff that there were no issues. Shortly thereafter, however, Plaintiff discovered news of the University being a sting operation by the Department of Homeland Security, with many students either arrested or deported.

32. Plaintiff's experiences with the University are typical of the class and over 500 other University of Farmington students.

33. Plaintiff suffered injury in fact and loss of money or property. He has been damaged by, inter alia, the amounts he has paid the University of Farmington in tuition.

CLASS ALLEGATIONS

34. Plaintiff brings this class action on behalf of himself individually and all others similarly situated, pursuant to Rule 23(b)(2) and (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

35. The proposed class consists of all persons who enrolled in and attended the University of Farmington from 2015 to 2019. Excluded from the Class are the University of Farmington, its affiliates, employees, officers, and directors, persons or entities that distributed or recruited students for the University of Farmington, the Judge(s) assigned to this case, and the attorneys of record in this case. Plaintiff reserves the right to amend the Class definition if discovery and further investigation reveal that the Class should be expanded or otherwise modified.

36. This action is properly brought as a class action for the following reasons:

- a. The proposed class is numerous and geographically dispersed through the United States and other countries, such that the joinder of all class members is impracticable. While Plaintiff does not know the exact number and identity of all class members, Plaintiff is informed and believes that there are hundreds of class members. The precise number of members can be ascertained through discovery.
- b. The disposition of Plaintiff's and proposed class members' claims in a class action will provide substantial benefits to both the parties and the Court.
- c. The proposed class is ascertainable and there is a well-defined community of interest in the questions of law or fact alleged herein since the rights of each proposed class member were infringed or violated in the same fashion.
- d. There are questions of law and fact common to the proposed class which predominate over any questions that may affect particular class members. Such common questions of law and fact include, but are not limited to:
 - i. Whether the conduct by the University of Farmington was unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent;
 - ii. Whether the University's advertising was likely to deceive the public;
 - iii. Whether the University's conduct was false, misleading, or likely to deceive;
 - iv. Whether the University violated the Michigan Consumer Protection Act;
 - v. Whether the University breached the terms of its contract with students to provide educational services;

- vi. Whether the University's actions breached the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing;
- vii. Whether the University unjustly received funds from Plaintiff or class members;
- viii. Whether the University is liable for intentional and/or negligent misrepresentations;
- ix. Whether the University is liable for fraud;
- x. Whether the University is liable for making false promises;
- xi. Whether the Plaintiff and proposed class members have been harmed and the proper measure of relief;
- xii. Whether Plaintiff and the proposed class members are entitled to an award of punitive damages, attorneys' fees and expenses against the Defendant; and
- xiii. Whether, as a result of Defendant's misconduct, Plaintiff is entitled to equitable relief, and if so, the nature of such relief.

- e. Plaintiff's claims are typical of the claims of the members of the proposed class. Plaintiff's claims arise from the same practices and conduct that give rise to the claims of all class members and are based on the same legal theories. He was injured by the same wrongful practices as other class members.
- f. Plaintiff will fairly and adequately protect the interest of the proposed class in that he has no interests antagonistic to those of the other proposed class members, and Plaintiff has retained attorneys experienced in consumer class actions and complex litigation.
- g. A class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy for at least the following reasons:
 - i. Given the size of individual proposed class members' claims and the expense of litigating those claims, few, if any, proposed class members could afford to or would seek legal redress individually for the wrongs Defendant committed against them, and absent proposed class members have no substantial interest in individually controlling the prosecution of individual actions;
 - ii. The action will promote an orderly and expeditious administration and adjudication of the proposed class claims; economies of time, effort, and resources will be fostered; and uniformity of decisions will be insured;
 - iii. Without a class action, proposed class members suffered injury will have no redress, and Defendant's violations of law will proceed without remedy while Defendant continue to reap and retain the substantial proceeds of its wrongful conduct; and
 - iv. Plaintiff knows of no difficulty that will be encountered in the management of this litigation which would preclude its maintenance as a class action.

37. Defendant has, or has access to, address information for the Class members, which may be used for the purpose of providing notice of the pendency of this class action.

38. Plaintiff seeks damages and equitable relief on behalf of the proposed class on grounds generally applicable to the entire proposed class.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

(Breach of Contract)

39. Contracts existed between Plaintiff, class members and the University of Farmington, which was controlled and operated by Defendant.

40. Defendant purported to offer admission to the University, including access to classes and advanced degrees. Plaintiff and other students indicated their acceptance of the offer of admission and provided consideration for the contract by paying tuition and other fees in the amounts of $10,000 to more than $15,000. The United States breached the contract when it failed to provide the offered classes and degrees.

41. All conditions precedent under the contracts have been performed by Plaintiff and the Class, including the payment of tuition, application fees, and other fees.

42. Defendant, operating and controlling the University, breached the terms of its standardized contracts with Plaintiff and the Class by failing to provide them with the promised products and services as contracted.

43. The law enforcement personnel from U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Homeland Security Investigations whose conduct bound the Defendant in contract with the Plaintiff and the Class members had actual authority to bind the government in contract, because forming these contracts was necessary and essential to the successful performance of the agents' assigned tasks and duties regarding carrying out the Farmington scheme. Enrolling students was an integral part of the Farmington scheme authorized by Defendant.

44. Defendant ratified the contracts. The law enforcement personnel from U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Homeland Security Investigations who authorized the University of Farmington scheme and the revocation of Farmington students' visa status had knowledge of the student contracts at the time the officials authorized revoking the students' visa status and accusing them of visa fraud. ICE has written records of each contract, including written communications between the students and the agents, and registration documents, invoices, and receipts sent from agents to students or displayed on the Farmington website portal. Defendant has accepted the benefit of the contracts by keeping all tuition money paid by Plaintiff and class members under the contracts.

45. As a result of Defendant's breach of its contracts, Plaintiff and the Class have been damaged.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

(Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing)

46. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference the allegations contained in the paragraph above as if fully set forth herein.

47. The law implies a covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract. Defendant, operating the University of Farmington, violated this covenant of good faith and fair dealing in its contract with Plaintiff and members of the Class by, inter alia, misrepresenting to Plaintiff and the Class the true nature of the University graduate program as alleged more fully elsewhere in the Complaint.

48. Plaintiff and members of the Class performed all, or substantially all, of the significant duties required under their agreements with Defendant.

49. The conditions required for Defendant's performance under the contract agreements had occurred.

50. Defendant did not provide and/or unfairly interfered with the right of Plaintiff and Class members to receive the benefit under their agreements with Defendant.

51. Plaintiff and the Class have been damaged by Defendant's breach of the implied covenant of good faith.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

52. WHEREFORE, Plaintiff prays this Court enter a judgment against Defendant that:

- A. This action be certified and maintained as a class action under Rule 23(b)(2) and (b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and certify the proposed class as defined, appointing Plaintiff as representative of the Class, and appointing the attorneys and law firms representing Plaintiff as counsel for the Class;
- B. Awards compensatory, statutory and/or punitive damages for Defendant's breach of contract, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, fraud, negligent misrepresentation and false promises, where such relief is permitted;
- C. Award Plaintiff and proposed class members the costs of this action, including reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses;
- D. Orders Defendant to immediately cease its wrongful conduct as set forth above; enjoins Defendant from continuing to falsely market and advertise, conceal material information, and conduct business via the unlawful and unfair business acts and practices complained of herein; orders Defendant to refrain from discriminating against Plaintiff and Class members in the Plaintiff and Class members' future applications to enter the United States, because of Plaintiff and Class members' ensnarement at the University; and requires Defendant to refund to Plaintiff and all of the Class members the funds paid to Defendant for the subject tuition and fees;
- E. Awards equitable monetary relief, including restitution and disgorgement of all ill-gotten gains, and the imposition of a constructive trust upon, or otherwise restricting the proceeds of Defendant's ill-gotten gains, to ensure that Plaintiff and proposed class members have an effective remedy;

- F. Awards pre-judgment and post-judgment interest at the legal rate; and
- G. Such further legal and equitable relief as this Court may deem just and proper.

Respectfully submitted,

By: /s/Amy E. Norris, Esq., (#1017140)

Amy@mwlc.org

(202) 530-0100

NORRIS LAW, PLLC

616 E Street NW

Suite 1156

Washington, DC 20004

Attorney for Teja Revi